

Faith in Action: How a Child's Generosity Is Impacting the World for Christ

God is still using the faith of children to grow His kingdom! Meet the Petersen family—Jordan, Angela, and their four kids: Eric, Amelia, Anastasia, and Evangeline. They're loyal users of the Keys for Kids app. This past Christmas, their son Eric chose to make a lasting impact by donating to Keys for Kids Ministries, a ministry close to the family's heart.

Growing up in Michigan, Jordan and Angela were familiar with Keys for Kids through programs like Children's Bible Hour and Uncle Charlie. Now living in New Jersey, they've introduced their children to Keys for Kids, and the audio devotions and on-demand programming has become an integral part of their nightly routine. "It's a great way to settle the kids down," Angela explained. "We know that whatever story they listen to will be God-honoring."

The Petersen's commitment to instilling generosity is both creative and Christ-centered. "For Christmas, we give our kids three gifts: something practical, something fun, and a donation they choose," Angela shared. "We want to teach them that Christmas isn't just about getting gifts; it's about Christ and giving to others." This year, Eric's choice to donate to Keys for Kids Ministries reminded the family how much the ministry continues to bless them and others.

Jordan highlighted how the app sparks meaningful conversations: "Keys for Kids often brings depth to our nightly prayers and opens discussions about faith and serving others. It's a huge blessing to us as parents." One memorable story from the app even encouraged their daughter to pray regularly for a friend she met who was a Ukrainian refugee.

God is using donations like the Petersen's to reach children not only in the US but also around the world. Through innovative efforts, such as sending 600,000 devotionals into Ukraine and solar-powered MP3 players to Afghanistan, Keys for Kids Ministries is advancing God's kingdom.
